

BE PART OF THE FUTURE: HIRE AN LPP CANDIDATE

from the Law Practice Program at Ryerson University

Q: Considering additional assistance in your practice?
Planning for the future of your practice?
Wondering how you can contribute to the future of the profession?

A: Your Solution –
A Law Practice
Program Candidate

WHAT IS THE LPP?

The LPP is a rigorous, innovative experiential alternative to traditional articling consisting of a four-month training component (August - December 2018) and a four-month work placement (January - April 2019). Candidates have the same status as articling students. The LPP is not an extension of law school. It is a practical, transitional program designed, developed and delivered by the Profession, for the Profession. The LPP is designed to equip candidates with the competencies and skills needed for success as a lawyer.

WHY LPP CANDIDATES?

Candidates hit the ground running, ready to assist you in your practice, with everything an articling student has plus four months of training in a 'virtual law firm'.

Candidates complete skills-based training using simulated practice scenarios in civil, business, family, real estate, administrative, criminal and wills and estates law, all developed and delivered by practising lawyers.

Candidates take files from start to finish, including interviewing, drafting, researching, determining the approach, negotiating, arguing motions and key parts of trials and conducting business and real estate transactions. They manage clients and time, and meet deadlines.

HOW TO GET STARTED?

The process is simple. The LPP Work Placement Office provides you with ease of hiring and integration, including in-placement support.

To access this talent pool, contact the LPP Work Placement Office at lpp.wpo@ryerson.ca and visit us at www.ryerson.ca/lpp.

Ryerson University

LAW PRACTICE
PROGRAM